On November 19, he held court to a rapt crowd at UCLA's Chicano Studies Research Center with a lively (and often hilarious) lecture titled, "From Tex[t]-Mex to Mextasy to Eyegiene: Televisually Supercharged Hallucinations of 'Mexicans' in our Digital Humanities-laced, Technosexually Voyeuristic Tomorrow(s)."

I will not attempt to summarize or analyze Nericcio's provocative presentation...I strongly suggest that you visit his blog and Tumblr pages (linked above) and read his engaging book, Tex[t]-Mex, which was reviewed by La Bloga's very own gluten-free intellectual, Michael Sedano, here. The great news is that Nericcio is working on a new book.

Here are some photos of the event. You will recognize several of the faces. And if you're interested in attending events at the UCLA Chicano Studies Research Center, visit here for a complete schedule.
