The UCLA Chicano Studies Research Center Press is a nonprofit, academic publishing house. We request nonexclusive, worldwide, English-language rights in perpetuity for print and electronic reproduction (via subscription and secure pay-per-view) as part of the published issue and in advertising, publicity, and promotional materials for the issue. At present all articles are produced in PDF, which is encrypted to prevent text being removed from its original context.

Because of the scholarly nature of the book, and because the journal does not reimburse any costs of securing permissions, I would be grateful if you would waive any reproduction fees. In return for this courtesy, the Chicano Studies Research Center Press will send you one complimentary copy of the journal.

Enclosed are two copies of the permissions form.. Please send one completed and signed form to my attention at the address below, and retain one copy for your records.

Thank you for your consideration.

Sincerely,
