

Poetry Reading and Writing Workshop with Leticia Hernandez-Linares

Date: Wednesday
November 12, 2014

Time: 12noon

Location: Dodd Hall, Room 161

The daughter of a Salvadoran family, Leticia was born in Los Angeles and has been living, writing and working in San Francisco's Mission District since 1995. For twenty years, she has been merging music and performance with her writing to communicate a poetry that crosses genre boundaries and geopolitical borders. Interdisciplinary at the core, she has collaborated with many talented visual artists and incorporates digital media, audience interaction, costume and props, and installation in her writing and art.

Co-Sponsored by the UCLA César E. Chávez
Department of Chicana/Chicano Studies and the Chicano Studies Research Center
