

SoCal Latinx – a new, multi-campus coalition of scholars – presents ...

Who Stole the Planet?

Colonization, Capital, and Enslavement

Dr. Priscilla Ybarra,
U of North Texas

Chicana/o/x environmental literary studies build on decolonial theory and the settler colonial critique, a potentially transformative intersection that could push Chicana/o/x studies toward forging an alliance with critical Indigenous studies. This will only be possible if scholars check the ways that Chicana/o/x identity has been complicit in settler colonial erasures. Hear more:

Friday, May 10, 3:30

in the Chicano Studies Research Center Library

144 Haines Hall, UCLA

Reception to follow

Dr. Ybarra is Associate Professor and Director of Graduate Studies in the Department of English at the University of North Texas. Her book Writing the Goodlife: Mexican American Literature and the Environment (2016) was chosen for the 2017 Thomas J. Lyon Award in Western American Literary and Cultural Studies and was selected as one of the six finalists for the 2017 ASLE Ecocriticism Book Award. She is co-editor of the forthcoming Latinx Environmentalisms: Place, Justice, and the Decolonial (Fall 2019). She serves on the board of directors for the Rio Puerco Rangeland Trust in New Mexico, on the Executive Council of the Association for the Study of Literature and Environment (ASLE), and she served a three-year term on the Board of Directors for Orion Magazine.

LABORATORY FOR ENVIRONMENTAL NARRATIVE STRATEGIES

Join Professor Ybarra earlier in the day for a roundtable discussion on editorial trends in Latinx Studies, where she will be joined by Professors Eliza Rodríguez y Gibson (LMU) and Charlene Villaseñor Black (UCLA).

“Editorializing latinidad”

Friday, May 10, 11-12:30 | 365 Kaplan Hall, UCLA

Networking and lunch to follow;
find more information and RSVP at the link below.

*This event proudly sponsored by:
The Bellarmine College of Liberal Arts at Loyola Marymount University, UCLA's Dean of Humanities, UCLA's Laboratory for Environmental Strategies, and UCLA's Department of English.*

<http://socalatinx.humspace.ucla.edu>

