A Lawyer, an Art Historian and an Anthropologist Examine Hidden and Visible Structures of Power

November 10, 2020

Southland Sessions Presents: From high school operas and drive-thru art exhibitions to Chicano comedies and underground DJ sets—we are showcasing the vibrancy of arts and culture across our city today.

In the third conversation of UCLA’s “10 Questions: Reckoning” series, William Boyd, lawyer, scholar, and environmental advocate; Chon Noriega, art historian, media scholar, and curator; and Jemima Pierre, Black Studies scholar and anthropologist, explore the question, "What is Power?"

10 Questions: Reckoning: What is Power?

https://youtu.be/CYYNO69SClo
Title: 10 Questions: Reckoning: What is Power?
Featured: William Boyd, Chon Noriega and Jemima Pierre
Presented By: UCLA School of the Arts and Architecture
Originally Presented: Oct. 19, 2020

About This Series
Both an upper division undergraduate course and a series of public conversations open to the broader community, the UCLA School of the Arts and Architecture's "10 Questions" series invites the public to join UCLA students in the virtual classroom to engage in vibrant conversation alongside leading faculty and distinguished alumni from across the university.

With COVID-19, the climate crisis, social and political turmoil unlike anything we have seen in a generation, and of course, a presidential election on our minds, this third installment of the annual 10 Questions series will be asking the most urgent set of questions yet.

RSVP to attend a 10 Questions lecture here.

MORE FROM "10 QUESTIONS"

Chon Noriega Talks Chicano Art and Power, Increasing Museum Diversity and How COVID-19 Impacts Latinos

What Does It Mean to Have True Justice? Artists and Scholars Weigh In

Hammer Curator Erin Christovale on How Museums Can Support Social Justice

CONNECT WITH KCET
Receive our weekly newsletter including KCET programming highlights, extra online content, special offers, events, and more.

FOLLOW US:

https://www.kcet.org/shows/southland-sessions/a-lawyer-an-art-historian-and-an-anthropologist-examine-hidden-and-visible